

Business Law (2000words)

"When a contract is made by post it is clear law throughout the common law countries that the acceptance is complete as soon as the letter is put into the post box, and that is the place where the contract is made. But there is no clear rule about a contract made by telephone or by Telex (or e-mail). Communications by these means are virtually instantaneous and stand on a different footing" per Lord Denning, in Entores Ltd v Miles Far East Corporation (1955) 2 QB 327 (C.A.)
